

NEUROFIVE INTERNSHIP · TASK 2

Build Your First Reusable Prompt Library

A modular Role + Context + Task + Format + Constraints template for Customer Support Replies — instantiated into 5 real, tested scenarios.

Prepared by: Chashman Aslam

Use case: Customer Support Email Replies

Library version: v1 — 5 prompts

Tool used: Claude

01 Overview

Professional prompt engineers don't rewrite prompts from scratch every time — they build reusable templates with placeholders, the same way developers write functions instead of copy-pasting code. This library documents a single reusable prompt template for Customer Support Replies, instantiated into 5 real, distinct scenarios, tested live, with actual outputs captured unedited.

02 The Reusable Template

Every prompt in this library follows the exact same 5-part skeleton. Only the bracketed variables change between uses — the structure itself never does.

ROLE: You are a [job title] at [company/product].

CONTEXT: [Customer's situation — what happened, relevant background,
their emotional state or urgency]

TASK: [Exactly what to write — e.g., "write a reply that acknowledges
X and offers Y"]

FORMAT: [Length, structure, greeting/sign-off requirements, whether to use bullet points or numbered steps]

CONSTRAINTS: [Tone rules, what must be included, what must be avoided, policy limits — e.g., don't promise exact dates, don't sound scripted]

Why this structure works:

Role anchors the voice and level of authority in the reply.

Context feeds in the specific situation so the reply isn't generic.

Task removes ambiguity about what output is actually expected.

Format controls length and structure so replies are consistent and ready to send.

Constraints enforces tone and policy boundaries — the guardrails that keep AI output safe to send without heavy editing.

03 Library Entry 1 — Late Delivery

APOLOGY + GOODWILL GESTURE

PROMPT

ROLE: You are a customer support specialist at ShopEase, an online retail company.

CONTEXT: A customer named Sarah ordered a laptop bag 3 days ago that was expected to arrive yesterday but hasn't shown up yet. She emailed frustrated, saying she needs it for a work trip tomorrow.

TASK: Write a reply that acknowledges the delay, apologizes sincerely, and offers a solution.

FORMAT: Email format, 100-150 words, with a subject line, greeting, and sign-off.

CONSTRAINTS: Warm and empathetic tone. Do not promise an exact delivery time unless verified. Offer a discount code or expedited shipping as a goodwill gesture. No corporate jargon.

LIVE OUTPUT

Subject: Following Up on Your Order — We're On It

Hi Sarah,

I'm really sorry your laptop bag hasn't arrived yet, especially with your trip coming up tomorrow — I know how stressful that timing is.

I've flagged your order for priority tracking right now so we can get you an update as soon as possible. In the meantime, I've added code RUSH15 for 15% off your next order as an apology for the inconvenience, and I'm looking into expedited shipping options to see if we can get this to you faster.

I'll follow up within the next few hours with a concrete update. Thank you for your patience, Sarah.

Warmly,
Alex — ShopEase Customer Support

04 Library Entry 2 — Billing Error

REASSURANCE + REFUND TIMELINE

PROMPT

ROLE: You are a billing support agent at FinTrack, a subscription-based expense tracking app.

CONTEXT: A customer named Ahmed was charged twice for his monthly subscription ($9.99 x2) due to a payment processing glitch. He's worried about being charged again next month.

TASK: Write a reply confirming the duplicate charge, explaining the refund process, and reassuring him about future billing.

FORMAT: Email format, 100-130 words, clear structure with a short bullet list of next steps.

CONSTRAINTS: Reassuring, professional tone. Must state the refund timeline (3-5 business days). Avoid blaming the customer or sounding overly technical.

Subject: Your Duplicate Charge — Refund Confirmed

Hi Ahmed,

Thanks for flagging this, and sorry for the confusion. I checked your account and confirmed you were charged twice ($9.99 x2) due to a processing glitch on our end.

Here's what happens next:

- The duplicate charge has been refunded to your original payment method
- You'll see it reflected within 3-5 business days
- Your subscription itself is unaffected — no action needed from you

I've also flagged your account so this doesn't happen again next billing cycle.

Best,

Layla — FinTrack Billing Support

05 Library Entry 3 — Product Defect

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND

PROMPT

ROLE: You are a customer care representative at HomeGlow, a home appliances brand.

CONTEXT: A customer named Maria received a blender that stopped working after 2 uses. She's requesting either a replacement or a full refund and is a repeat customer.

TASK: Write a reply offering both options (replacement or refund), and outline the return process.

FORMAT: Email format, 120-150 words, with a numbered list for the return process.

CONSTRAINTS: Empathetic but efficient tone. Must acknowledge her loyalty as a repeat customer. Include return instructions clearly. Do not sound scripted.

LIVE OUTPUT

Subject: Let's Fix This For You, Maria

Hi Maria,

I'm sorry to hear your blender stopped working after just two uses — that's not the experience we want for a customer who's been with us as long as you have, and I appreciate you giving us the chance to make it right.

You have two options:

1. Replacement — we'll ship a new unit right away, at no cost to you
2. Full refund — processed back to your original payment method

To get started:

1. Reply with your preferred option
2. We'll email you a prepaid return label
3. Once the item ships back, your replacement or refund goes out within 2 business days

Best,

Omar — HomeGlow Customer Care

06 Library Entry 4 — How-To Question

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTIONS

PROMPT

ROLE: You are a friendly support agent at CloudNote, a note-taking app.

CONTEXT: A new user, Jason, emailed asking how to enable dark mode and sync notes across devices.

TASK: Write a reply with clear step-by-step instructions for both features.

FORMAT: Email format, 100-140 words, using two short numbered lists (one per feature).

CONSTRAINTS: Friendly, concise tone. No unnecessary preamble. Assume the user is not very technical.

LIVE OUTPUT

Subject: Dark Mode + Syncing — Here's How!

Hi Jason,

Great questions — both are easy to set up!

Dark Mode: 1. Open Settings (gear icon) 2. Tap "Appearance" 3. Select "Dark"

Sync Across Devices: 1. Go to Settings > Account 2. Sign in with the same email on each device 3. Toggle "Auto-Sync" on

Cheers,

Sam — CloudNote Support

07 Library Entry 5 — Positive Review Reply

THANK YOU + SOFT REFERRAL

PROMPT

ROLE: You are a customer engagement specialist at Brewly, a specialty coffee subscription service.

CONTEXT: A customer named Priya left a 5-star review praising the flavor variety and fast shipping, and mentioned she's already recommended Brewly to friends.

TASK: Write a warm thank-you reply that acknowledges her specific praise and gently encourages her to share her referral code.

FORMAT: Short reply, 60-90 words, casual and appreciative tone, no formal greeting/sign-off needed (review-reply style).

CONSTRAINTS: Genuine, not salesy. Mention the referral program only briefly, not pushy. Use her name.

LIVE OUTPUT

Hi Priya, thank you so much for this — it genuinely made our day! We're so glad the flavor variety hit the mark, and getting it to you quickly is exactly what we aim for. Recommending us to friends means the world to us, truly. If they ever sign up, don't forget you've got a referral code waiting to earn you both a little something extra. Thanks again for being part of the Brewly community! ☺

08 Library Summary

#	Scenario	Tone	Length	Special Requirement
1	Late delivery	Empathetic, urgent	100-150w	Goodwill gesture
2	Billing error	Reassuring, calm	100-130w	Bullet list + timeline
3	Product defect	Empathetic, efficient	120-150w	2 options + numbered steps
4	How-to question	Friendly, concise	100-140w	2 numbered instruction sets
5	Positive review	Warm, genuine	60-90w	Soft referral only

09 Why This Matters

Rewriting a support reply prompt from scratch every time costs time and produces inconsistent tone across a team. This template turns that into a fill-in-the-blank operation: swap five variables, get a polished, on-brand reply in seconds — whether the situation is a shipping delay, a billing glitch, or a five-star review. That's the actual promise of "reusable prompts": not saving typing, but saving judgment calls by encoding them once into a structure everyone on a team can reuse consistently.
